

MLC 223 Business Ethics
This course has been designed to create awareness for intercultural problems as such. Students will have an insight into different cultures as well as their own culture. They will learn to perceive and assess differences between cultures as well as to deal with people from various cultural backgrounds. The main focus will be put on the subjective processes of perception of situations as well as their assessment and interpretation. Students will acquire skills that will help them deal with incidents resulting from intercultural differences (if applicable).
Assessment: 75% attendance minimum, written exam
